"An All-Star Tribute to Brian Wilson" honors the Beach Boy who was just 19 when he started the group at 7 p.m. Wednesday on TNT

TNT has fun, fun, fun

By Jacqueline Cutler
TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

When one thinks of the Beach Boys, Ricky Martin shaking his booty to "Help Me Rhonda" isn't the first thing that comes to mind. But as incongruous as the image of Martin — decked out in blue snakeskin pants and cowboy boots — singing that song is, he is only the first celebrity of many in "An All-Star Tribute to Brian Wilson," airing on TNT at 7 p.m. Wednesday, July 4.

Indeed, the entire two-hour concert, condensed from a longer live show that rocked Radio City Music Hall on March 29, is full of surprises. The biggest surprise is that talent as diverse as the Harlem Boys Choir, Billy Joel and Elton John works so well on the same bill.

All the artists were united by a profound respect for Wilson, whom they credit with changing American music. Host Chazz Palminteri ("Boss of Bosses") reminisces about how Wilson's music of surf and cars touched him deeply when he was growing up in the Bronx.

"The first time I heard 'Good Vibrations,' I listened to it over and over again," Palminteri says. "In my neighborhood, it was not cool to admit you liked the Beach Boys. ... Even the tough guys in my neighborhood liked the Beach Boys."

And therein lies the message: Wilson's music knows no boundaries. Palminteri, a true Bronx Bomber, is as much a fan as Sir George Martin, the erudite and elegant producer of some Beatles records.

Gillian Anderson and Mitch Pileggi star in "The X-Files," at 8 p.m. Sundays on Fox. It is one of several prime-time TV shows that use special effects.

Special effects go big

By Candace Havens
TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

During summer 2000, moviegoers watched as gigantic waves crushed a fishing boat in "The Perfect Storm" and Tom Cruise dangled from a cliff in "MI-2." A ghostly apparition chased Michelle Pfeiffer and Harrison Ford in "What Lies Beneath," and the stars of "X-Men" fought battles with supernatural strength as they flew through the air.

All these films and most major releases in Hollywood these days use special-effects makeup and computer-generated images to make stories more exciting. And as these effects become more refined and easier to duplicate, the same technology is being used more than ever on prime-time and daytime TV.

In "Allosaurus: A Walking With Dinosaurs Special," airing Sunday, April 8, on Discovery Channel, the producers use CGI to depict aspects of the dinosaur's life and create images of what scientists think it looked like. The animated sequences show viewers what the world looked like millions of years ago.

"CGI allows Discovery Channel to offer viewers a realistic 'you are there' vision of certain events or periods in Earth's history — like the life and death of a dinosaur 145 million years ago," says "Allosaurus" executive producer Mick Kaczorowski. "That would be impossible to create without this kind of technology."

Fox's "The X-Files" and The WB Network's "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" use special effects on a weekly basis. HBO's crime-drama "The Sopranos," which created a talking fish last season, digitally put the head of deceased cast member Nancy Marchand on the body of another actress in the season opener.

'Gatsby'

By John Crook
TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

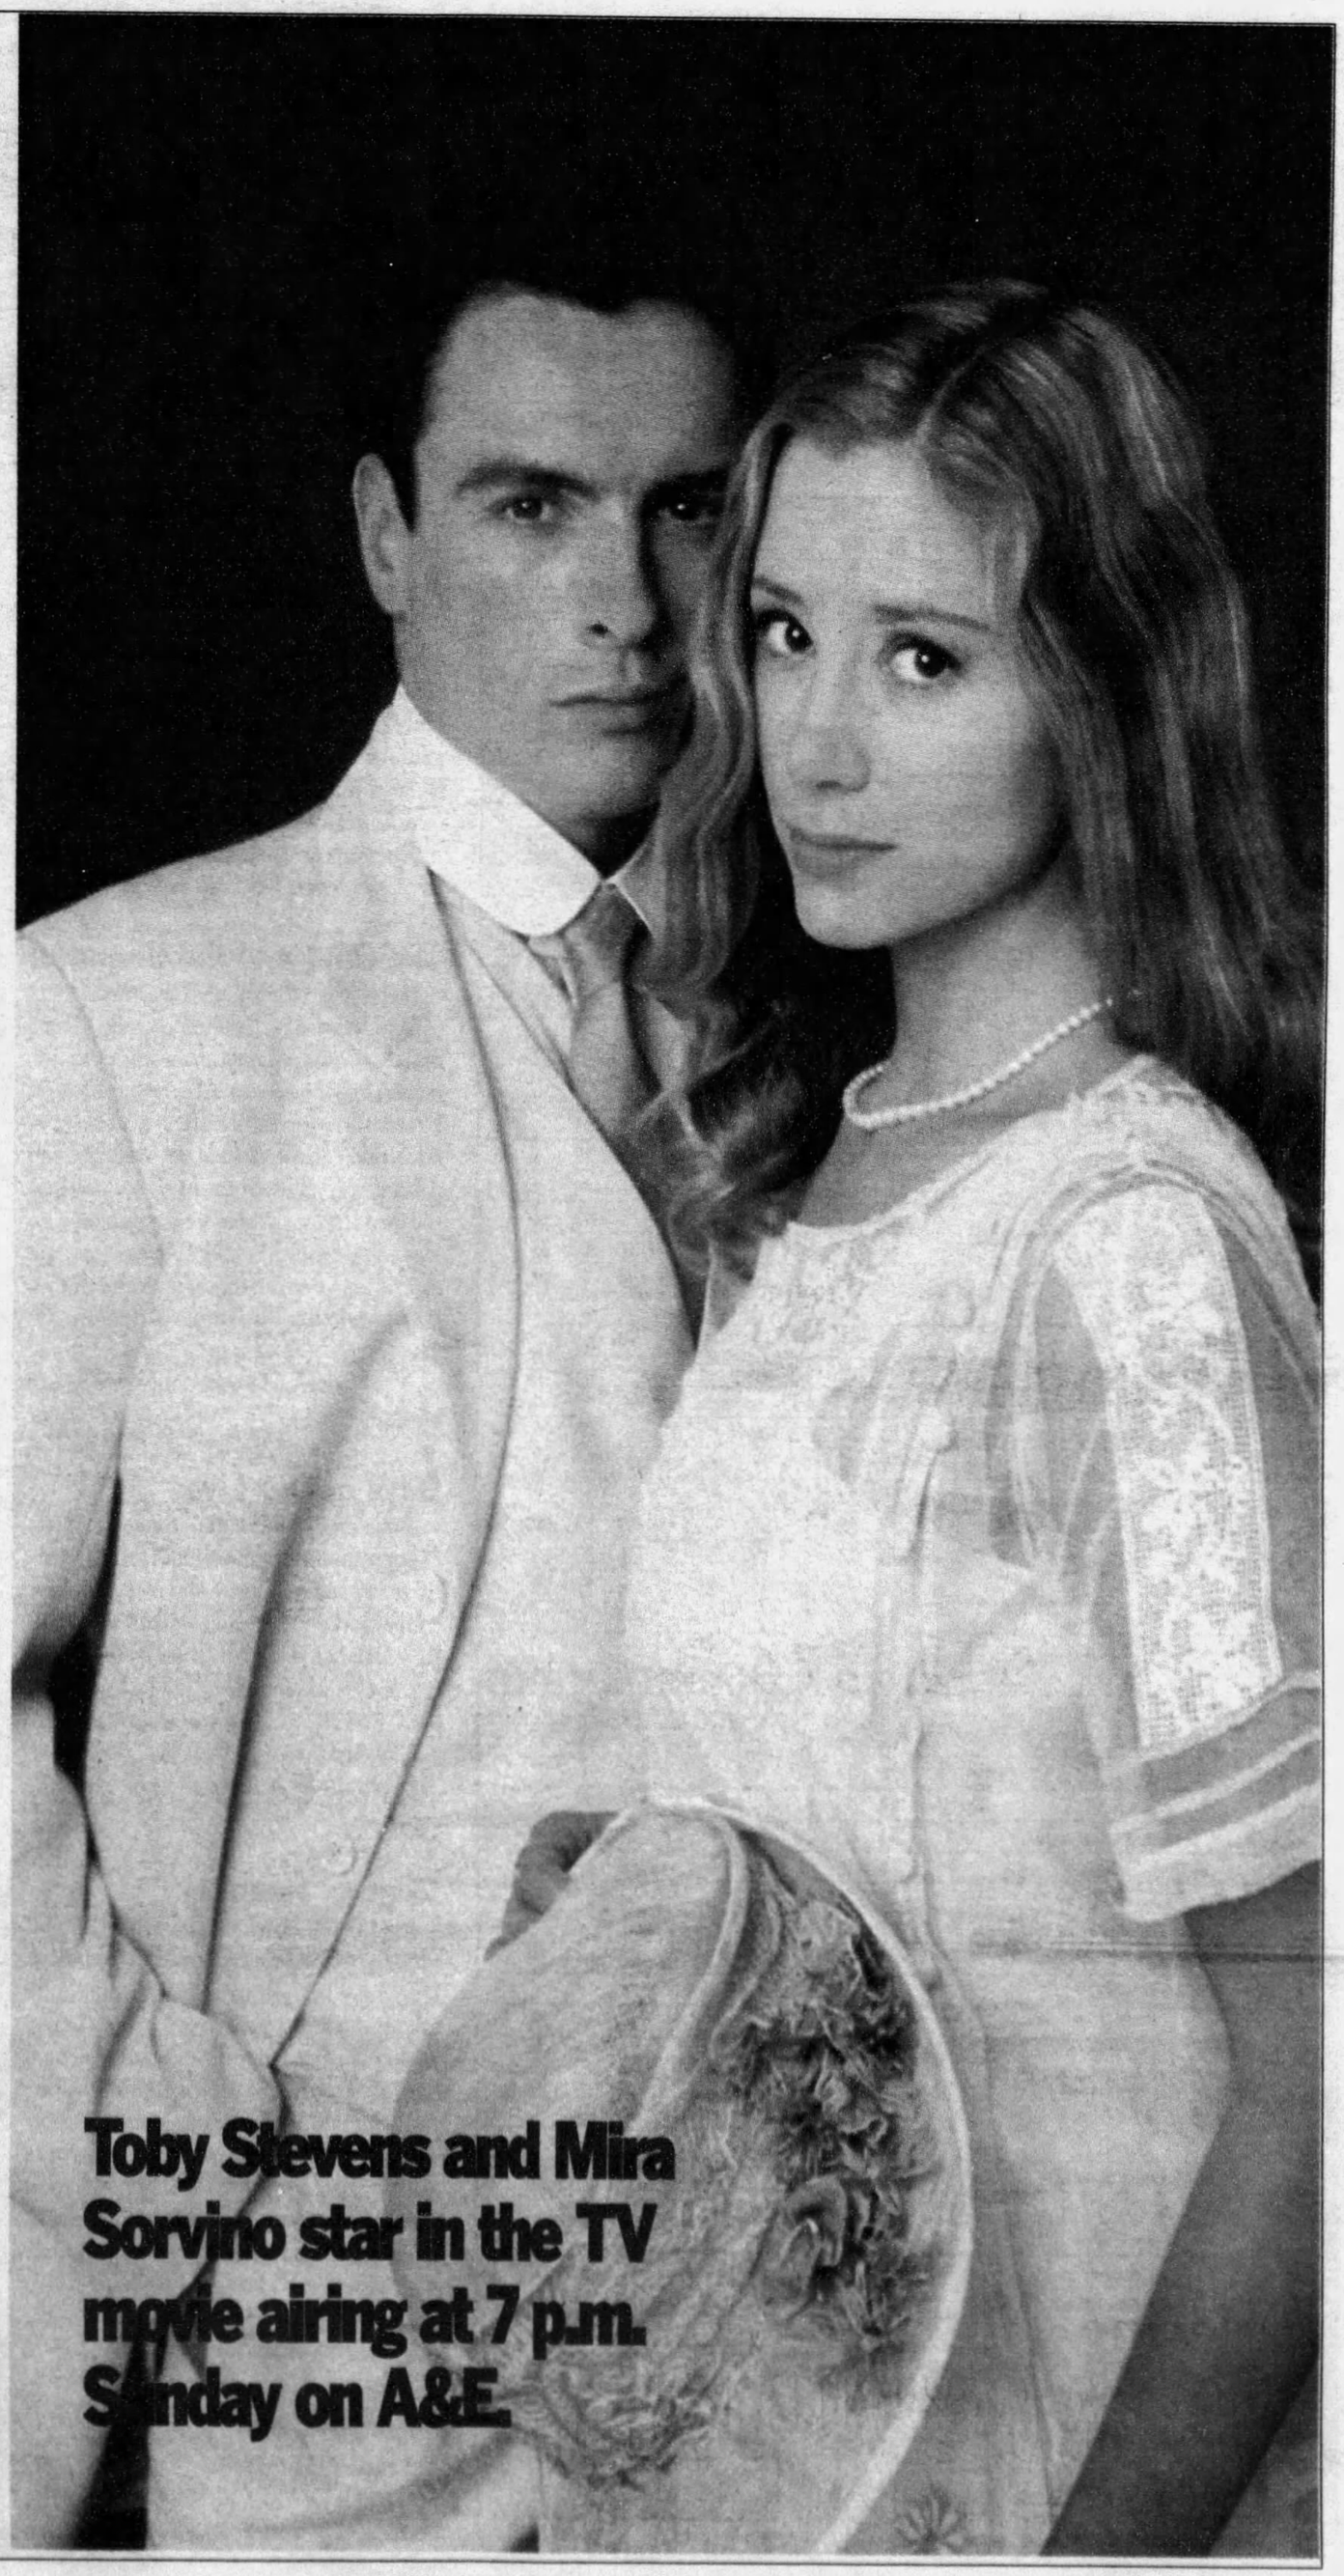

F. Scott Fitzgerald's "The Great Gatsby" is that rare masterwork, a novel that holds both the respect of literary scholars and the boundless affection of the many readers who have fallen under its spell since its 1925 publication.

Its best-known movie adaptation, the bloated 1974 version starring a miscast Robert Redford and Mia Farrow, was more about Theoni V. Aldredge's Oscar-winning costumes and the lavish set design, however, than it was about Fitzgerald's unforgettable characters.

Happily, A&E Network is here to set things (mostly) right with a (mostly) exceptional and emotionally true rendering of this deceptively complex work premiering Sunday, Jan. 14.

At the focus of the drama are its Daisy and Gatsby, Oscar winner Mira Sorvino and British actor Toby Stephens, the son of Maggie Smith and Robert Stephens. They are joined by the dependable Paul Rudd ("The Object of My Affection") as Nick Carraway, the wry narrator; Martin Donovan ("Wonderland") as Tom Buchanan, Daisy's often brutal husband; and newcomer Francie Swift as Nick's lover, Jordan Baker.

"Daisy is sort of a dreamer," Sorvino says of her character. "She's not a terribly pragmatic person, kind of almost like a child in many ways. She's very instinctive and likes to run around creating happy little moments.

'Golden Globes'

By John Crook
TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

The Hollywood Foreign Press Association has weathered its own share of bad press over the years with past allegations that some members were not authentic working journalists and that the membership as a group displayed a willingness to present one of its Golden Globe Awards to the performer or studio offering the most satisfying press junket.

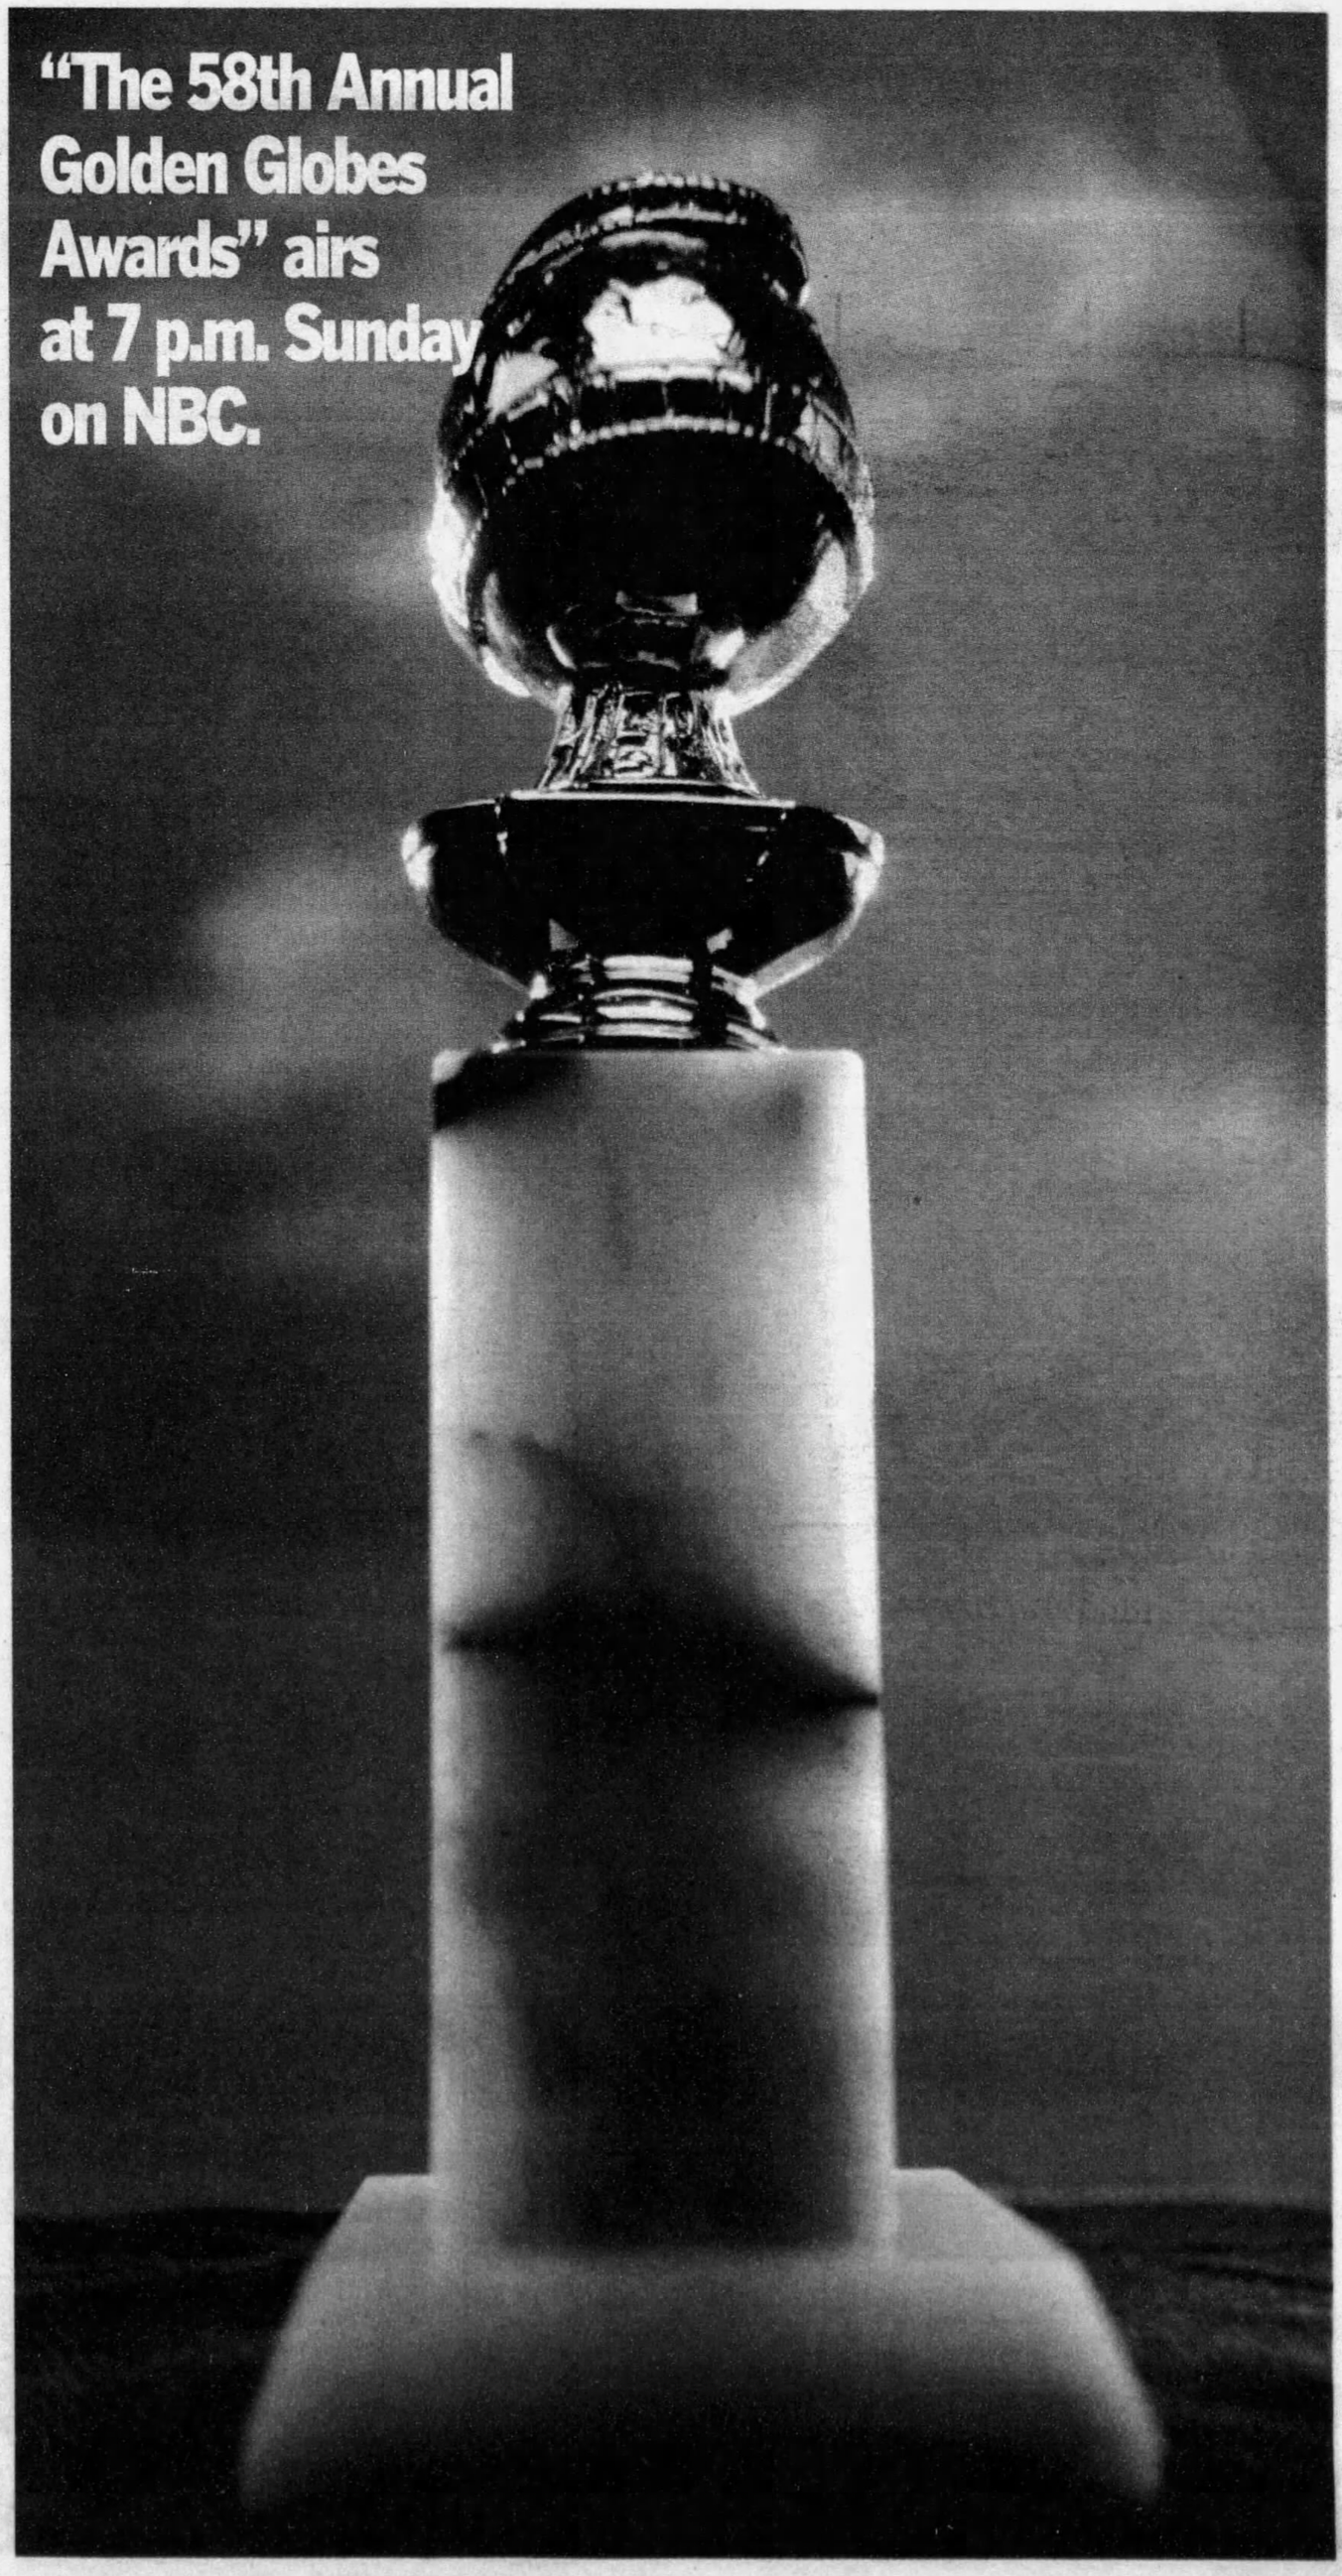

Times change and few will be laughing when "The 58th Annual Golden Globes Awards" ceremony airs Sunday, Jan. 21, on NBC.

Part of that newfound respect simply reflects the fact that the HFPA has taken steps to clean up its act, purging its membership rolls of ringers and generally trying to be a ready-for-prime-time awards show.

With many major releases earning a hefty percentage of their total box-office take abroad, few in Hollywood are inclined to blow off the Golden Globes. While their validity as a bellwether of the Academy Awards may be overstated — the Globes split the main movie awards between "drama" and "comedy-musical" categories, thus effectively doubling the odds their choices will repeat at the Oscars — these January awards throw a spotlight on movies that the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences might otherwise overlook.

Take "Sunshine," for example, an English-language film about Hungarian Jews starring Ralph Fiennes in a triple role. It has been in limited release, yet it's a surprise best drama nominee alongside such heavyweights as "Gladiator" and two Steven Soderbergh films, "Erin Brockovich" and "Traffic."

Another nominated drama, "Wonder Boys," was a critical success but a box-office flop after its studio, by general consensus, bungled the ad campaign, while the sleeper hit "Billy Elliot," about a working-class British lad burning to dance, is likewise nominated.

Super Bowl faces competion

By Josh Greene
TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

Those people who believe television isn't educational need look no further than the lessons learned through last year's biggest televised sporting events.

We found out that not many people outside the Big Apple are interested in watching a New York Yankees-New York Mets matchup in the World Series, and that watching tape-delayed Olympic coverage is about as popular as watching "The Crocodile Hunter" with any host other than Steve Irwin.

In an all-too-familiar scenario for television networks, fewer viewers are tuning in for the sporting events that used to be "can't-miss" ratings winners.

With the ever-increasing number of sports programming options across the TV dial, maybe viewers have more than they know what to do with. Don't forget to factor in multinight sporting events. What is it they say about too many cooks in the kitchen?

"There's a general erosion that's not just (in) sports," CBS Sports President Sean McManus says. "It's harder to watch when there's so much more on."

"With free agency, the other (TV) choices and no real fan loyalty, there's a lot of speed bumps in the road for different sports to figure out," says CBS Sports executive producer Terry Ewert. And he should know; he's one of the men behind perhaps the only sure bet in sports programming: the Super Bowl, which airs on CBS Sunday, Jan. 28. CBS Sports regulars Greg Gumbel and Phil Simms call the game.
